

Round 4: Scenario

The year is 1789. You are a peasant in France. Due to France's cost to participate in the American Revolution and King Louis XVI's extravagant spending, France is on the brink of bankruptcy. You and your fellow peasants are fed up with the monarchy and change is needed. Resolved: Storm the Bastille.

It is the summer of 1519. You are an Aztec scout positioned outside the capital city and armed with a bow and arrow. You see a large army of Spaniards marching toward the city and note that one in particular is leading the group. Another scout reports he is Hernan Cortes, a Spanish conquistador intent on taking your capital. You are told to stay put and keep your guard. However, you know you must protect your city. Resolved: Shoot Cortes with an arrow.

It is July 3, 1863, at the Battle of Gettysburg, and you are Confederate General James Longstreet. Union forces are concentrated behind a stone wall across the field, and General Lee orders you to have all your men advance on this one position. You know your men will take heavy fire and suffer immense losses, but Lee knows if you fail to take the wall, the South loses the war. Resolved: Order the charge.
